Faculty of Liberal Arts

Course information

Bachelor year 2 12 HOURS

Spring Semester 2 ECTS

Lectures (CM)

Professor: Laurent Gayard

Course Code: FDL_SCPO_L2_S4_CM_SCPO

Course description

Following the theoretical approach of the different political organisations and regimes, the course will elaborate on different examples of contemporary forms of government such as United Kingdom, USA, China, Russia, Iran, India...In order to fully understand the founding principles of the different political organisations and apply the specific methodology of Comparative Politics. The course is entirely in English, in order to allow the students to master the specific vocabulary attached to this field of study.

Learning Objectives

The second semester will elaborate about different political systems, such as Russia/Singapore, People's Republic of China/Republic of Taiwan, Israel/India, Saudi Arabia/Iran, International Institutions...to allow the study of important notions and features of contemporary politics: parliament, forms of democracy, role of religion in modern political systems, governance/government...

Course Prerequisites

The students will need some basic knowledges in political sciences and political philosophy, as to be able to deal with the essential notions of comparative politics and understand the specifications of the different political systems studied during the course. Many different political organisations are studied here, but there are all, to some extent and degree, interlinked by a common political theoretical framework with which the student must at least be familiar with: forms of democracy, theorisation of the separation of powers, checks and balances. The course will especially interest students who are interested in political sciences and geopolitics and aim to strengthen their culture in those fields.

Methods of Instruction

Lectures (CM). Critic analysis of documents, research and group and individual work during the tutorial sessions (TD).

Assessment and Final Grade

The final grade is obtained thanks to semester final sessions and tutorial examinations.

Course Requirements

The final grade is obtained thanks to semester final sessions and tutorial examinations.
